Readings by E. C. Townsend.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather, this popular elecutionist was greeted, at Tailmadgs Hall last night by a large sudience, representing the most intelligent and appreciative class of the Washington public. The programme was well selected, as embracing the humorous and pathetic. The entertainment met the most actually expectations of the sudience in the high order of teleut displayed by ldf. Townsend and the enjoyment which his rare powers of mining afforded. Added to his envisible powers of imitation, his voice, both in clearness, modulation, and distingt unterance, showed most careful and rigid distingt unterance, showed most careful and rigid distinct utterance, showen most careful raining.

His power of losing binsself completely in the characters he personates is perhaps the greatest secret of his success.

Mr. Townsend may well be proud of the expressions of appreciation so ably won from his audience last night. A marked improvement over his efforts of last season was noted by his most critical hearers, and his friends bespeak for him a more extensive popularity as an electrication of the control of the
